

POWERS AND CREWE PHOTOGRAPHY

Design House Catches D.C. Fever

D.C. neighborhoods are the inspiration for "Potomac Fever," the latest show house at the Washington Design Center, which opens to the public Friday. Eight local designers have created rooms representing historic Washington districts using furnishings from the center's to-the-trade showrooms, including the Kalorama parlor, above, by Laytonsville designer Dana Tydings. Sponsored by Southern Living, the Fall Design House runs through Dec. 12 at the Washington Design Center, 300 D St. SW. Admission is free. For more information, visit www.dcdesigncenter.com/designhouse/fall2009.

Terri Sapienza

