

Wednesday, March 2, 2011

Dream Home Countdown: WDC

Ha, not MY dream home exactly.

But that's not what this post is about! 16 days until the Washington Design Center reveals its latest, jewelry-inspired rooms designed by eight D.C. based designers. Anyone in the DC/MD/VA area has zero excuse to skip out on paying the latest reveal a visit.

I used to intern at a few showrooms located within the Design Center and most days were a struggle to stay focused! Not because of my work ethic, but it's quite a task to be in a room full of whimsical, ritzy, worth-more-than-your-entire-life furnishings. Showroom after showroom of opulent textiles makes steady breathing a challenge. It's a rush and I like it.

The designers were given a piece of jewelry as inspiration and asked to design a room surrounding the unique features of the charm. For the last few hours I've been investigating the designers, and a few of their design concepts.

Care to share?? OOOOF COURSE!

Bedroom Suite: Zoe Feldman

"Pops of bolder colors, such as saffron and melon, provide vibrancy and a touch of the unexpected."

Bedroom: Chad Alan

"We have all tightened our belts a notch or two in the past couple years, but the time has come to enjoy life a bit easier. Bleak and beige has ended, and we all deserve color now."

Sitting Room: Charlotte Lakakos

" The patriotic palette is sophisticated and, most of all, optimistic!"

This is only a preview of the eight rooms that will be showcased on March 17th! I'll be sure to take pictures and post about it :0)